The Wife of Rev. O. W. Jennings Quietly Applied for a Divorce and Fled.

Denies Her Allegations in a Cross-Bill and Says She Did Various Things She Should Not Have Done.

Yesterday Rev. Oliver W. Jennings filed suit to be divorced from his wife. Mr. Jennings is pastor of the Shelby-street Christian Church, and the circumstances leading up to this suit are peculiar. A Journal reporter interviewed Mr. Jennings last evening and obtained his side of the story. "I have tried to avoid publicity in this matter as far as possible," said Mr. Jennings. "Four weeks ago my wife deserted me. We lived at No. 442 East Mc-Carty street. I was at New Albany at the time. I am grand vice-commander of the United Order of the Golden Cross. I went to New Albany to the meeting of the order for Kentucky and Indiana. I was gone two days. The morning I left she appeared to be very affectionate. She kissed me good-bye and parted apparently on the best of terms. I told her I would be away a couple of days. On my return to my home I found it deserted.

"Then I found she had filed a divorce suit against me and disappeared. In her suit she alleges cruel and inhuman treatment, and that I was an habitual user of opium. In my cross complaint I have denied her charges in general and in particu-lar. I have always treated her kindly and with great attention. She had a beautiful home handsomely furnished, and a servant. She has been kept as a lady and had every advantage that my calling and association could give ber."

"How about the charge of being an habitual user of opium? "I never took a pinch of opium in my life. I never had any of the drug in my

"Is it true that while you were pastor of the Sixth Christian Church a split occurred in the congregation?" "There was a little disaffection in the church before I went there, but it could not be called a split. It was a small faction. I have a few personal enemies in that church. I was pastor there last year. There are a half dozen persons in that church who have influenced my wife against me. I came here, from Westport, Ky., a year ago last September. The people of my present charge, the Shelby-street Christian Church, have investigated the allegations made against me, and are fully satisfied. They sent a man to Westport, where I have been known from the cradie up. My present trouble has made no difference whatever in my church relation.

"She filed her suit the day before she left me. She went up late one afternoon to do it. I had heard a rumor that she intended to do so, and talked to her about it. She denied it, and assured me the rumor was false; that she had no intention whatever of asking for a divorce. At that very time she was making arrangements, and, as I said, the day before I went to New Albany she had filed her application. With her assurance I dismissed the matter from my mind.

"When I came back and found she had have waited for nearly a month before filing my cross-complaint. In the meantime I have sought an interview with her and spent considerable money in traveling expenses to find out where she was, to get a meeting. I have not succeeded in meeting her. wished to bring about a reconciliation if possible. I understand she is at Danville, Ind. I deny in my complaint that I ever threatened her with bodily harm or used vile and abusive language to her, as she alleges in her complaint. On the contrary, as I allege in my complaint, she has used vulgar language toward me, called me a liar and a dog, and has kicked me. She has conducted nerself in such a way as to bring reproach upon me. She has had a fondness for the company and society of other men, and that has made talk. She has repestedly said she did not love me. In my complaint I ask the court to prevent her from taking the child out of its jurisdiction, as I understand she is about to send it to Texas. The child is a boy, named after myself, and will be two years old the 22d of July."

"How old is she, and how long have you been married?" inquired the reporter. "She claims to be twenty-two years old. but I think she is twenty-eight or twenty-nine. We were married at Columbia, Tenn. I do not know whether she was married before or not. She was a member of the Christian Church. 1 met her about the first of October, 1887, and we were married on the 22d of February following. The members of my church have advised me to do as I have done, and are standing by me. There is no charge of immorality made against me, even by my enemies." Mr. Jennings is a rather handsome man, thirty-one years old, exceedingly candid and open in his statements, and apparently greatly depressed over the wreck of his domestic happiness.

Mr. Marrow Again in Court, Samuel L. Marrow and Mrs. Lettie Cook, the blind widow, are again at law. It will he remembered that some time ago Marrow brought suit against Mrs. Cook for possession of a house on the Pendleton pike, where he had installed her to keep house for a friend of his. He lost his suit before Squire Alford, appealed to the Superior Court and lost again. Last Thursday be determined to have his furniture and went before 'Squire Feibleman and had a constable go out to the house and take every-thing. The latter had to beg Marrow to leave a chair for the woman to sit upon. although he took the bed, table and everything else, even the stove, out of the house. Now Mrs. Cook has replevined the goods. and it was this case that was heard yester-day before Squire Ferbleman. The suit is against Marrow's wife, Amanda J. Marrow.
The case was heard before a jury and as large a lobby as the little justice shop would hold. The sympathy of every body was with the unfortunate woman, because of her infirmity and her treatment by Marrow. The case was not concluded last Whisky Got the Better of Him. Charles Audrews, who was arrested recently for taking a watch and chain and coat and vest from Ed. Landers, wrote Judge Cox a very penitent and earnest letter protesting his innocence of any intention to steal the articles, but said that he let liquor get the better of him and didn't know what he was doing. He also said that he was a member of the Murphy League and had kept faith with his vow for several years but in an unguarded moment, whilst with a crowd of companions, . e consented to take a drink, and then all was over with him. It was the touching of a fire brand to oil.

Change in Justices' Offices. Two justices of the peace ended their official existence yesterday and two others took their places, so the mills of equity will grind on just in the old sweet way again. Those whose terms expired were C. B. Feibleman and Frement Alford, and their benches were filled by James Johnson and M. H. Daniels, respectively. Both Mr. Feibleman and Mr. Alford will resume their practice of law, from which they were taken to administer justice from a 'squire's

Charged with Sundry Crimes. Fred Kruger, who stands charged, as in two indictments returned yesterday, with arson, burglary and petit larceny, pleaded not guilty to all three, yesterday, when arraigned in the Criminal Court. He is accused by Bernd Bros. with breaking into their carriage-shop and stealing some carriage trimmings, then setting fire to the building, damaging it to the extent of $300.

Women Charged with Theft. Among the indictments returned by the grand jury yesterday were two against women. One was against Alice Meyers, charged with stealing from Pearl Albertson a pocket-book containing $1.80 and two afternoon.

Wanted to "Paint the Town." Mel McPherson was indicted by the grand jury yesterday for petit larceny. He only took two buckets of red paint, from the profits of which he hoped to paint the town red, but he is an old-timer. He has served two terms in the State prison, and Judge Cox knows him like a book.

Plucked His Flowers. Mrs. George Sortwell and Miss Esther Simmons are defendants in a suit brought in 'Squire Habich's court for "willful and malicious destruction of property." Albert Smith lives on South Illinois street, and in his front yard are, or were, some very beautiful flowers, which he charges Mrs. Sortwell and Miss Simmons with plucking.

Moran-Kane Shooting. The grand jury was yesterday discussing the case of the shooting of John Kane by Martin Moran. At the last meeting of the grand jury Kane was unable to come into court, and for that reason the case was postponed.

AMUSEMENTS.

PARK THEATER -"THE MIDNIGHT ALARM." Since last seen here, "The Midnight Alarm" has been rewritten by Leander Richardson, editor of the New York Dramatic News, and, in its amended form, it is now much improved, for the story is more coherent, the plot more skillfully developed, and the situations made much stronger. There were very large audiences at the Park to see it, at both performances yesterday, and the presentation of the stirring scenes and sensational incidents evoked enthusiastic demonstrations. The scenery and mechanical effects add much to the interest of the play. The most notable of these are the views of the East-river docks and the Brooklyn bridge, the "living clock," the railroad draw-bridge, the flight of the fast express, and the engine-house scene-in which an engine, with steam up. drawn by horses, dashes across the stage. The comedy element is much more prominent this season than last, and the play, in its present form, is one of the best of the sensational melodramas. Arthur Sprague plays Harry Westners, the hero, with in-telligence and force; Mildred St. Pierre, a the waif, and Mr. Ranous makes a good villain, while the cast otherwise is satisfactory. "The Midnight Alarm" will run all week.

NOTES. Harry McDowell, who sings "Lieutenant Lollypop" in "Ship Aboy," is an Indianapolis boy, one of the many who have earned success on the stage.

Mr. Frank McKee, who is now general manager for Hoyt & Thomas's numerous attractions, and is kept busier with them than the President is with government affairs, will arrive in Indianapolis to-day, to let it become known that "A Temperance Town," Mr. Hoyt's new comedy, will be produced here next week.

The Miller Opera Company will begin an engagement of three nights and matinee at the Grand to-night in "Ship Ahoy," a new farcical operetts, the music of which is by Fred Miller and the libretto by H. Grattan Donnelly. The company, which is com-posed of fifty people, includes, among others, Louise Montague, the erstwhile "ten-thousand-dollar beauty;" James E. Sultivan, a clever comedian; Harry B. Bell. Florence Dunbar. Anna Barrett and others. The music of "Ship Ahoy" is not pretentions, but is tuneful and catching. The opera has met with success in the East, particularly in Boston and New York.

WATER FROM WHITE RIVER

Prof. Floyd Davis Makes His Report Upon It to the City Board of Health.

Samples Taken from Above and Below the Pond-City Water Now Potable, but He Fears for the Future.

Some days ago the Department of Public Health employed the services of Dr. Floyd Davis, of Des Moines, Ia., to come here and make an analysis of water, to see whether or not the straw-board-works at Noblesville pollutes the city's water supply and to give testimony in a case against the straw-board-works in the federal court. Professor Davis finds, as have all others, that the health of the citizens of Indianapolis is daily menaced by the water consumed for domestic purposes. His conclusions are, in effect, as follows:

"In complying with your request, I herewith hand you a brief statement of my views of the White river water pollution at Noblesville by the American straw-boardworks. From an examination of the process of manufacture, I find that a large amount of albuminous substances extracted from straw is carried daily into White river, and that these substances are in a condition to render the water unfit for human consumption. They are of a character that readily undergo decomposition, generate poisons and in warm weather they are a most favorable pabulum on which all kinds of germs multiply and develop. The albuminous substances are not dangerous until they undergo fermenta-tion and decay. This, however, soon takes place, and the river water is then injured by them. The process of natural purification may remove a large amount of the organic matter, as would be shown by analysis, but it certainly cannot entirely remove the nitrogenous poisons and germs that develop from and upon it.

"I have not yet analyzed the river water to determine its nature, but I would certainly say it must be suspicious, and if the present amount of straw-board pollution continues the city's public water will eventually be injured by it. Two samples of water were taken from the vicinity of the raw-board-works - one from the that connects the works with the settling pond; one from the channel below the dam. Both samples under analysis prove unfit to flow into any stream that must form the basis of the water supply for a city. About 50 per cent. is removed in the settling pond, but only 20 per cent. of the decomposing substances is there removed. The dam is not a filter in any sense, nor isit a mechanical strainer. "I have examined the gallery of the water-works and the surrounding soil to determine the source of the city supply. The soil is a loose drift gravel that allows water to penetrate it with ease. Some of the gallery water must come from the river by percolation, for it has only a few upon the river supply will increase." Dr. Davis also called attention to the fact that well water should not be used. as it is unfit for domestic use. "In conclusion," he said, "while the city water supply is, at present, very good and, I believe, fit for all domestic purposes, the question of its continuing so becomes a very serious one when we consider the amount of pollution now flowing into the river at Noblesville and other places above there. It appears to me that the State and the city boards of health should exercise every duty that the law provides to prevent pollution of your water supply. As the health of your people depends largely upon the purity of the water they drink, laws cannot be too soon and too rigorously enforced. The straw-board-works and other manufactories should be compelled to dispose of their refuse without flowing it into your public water supply and thus eopardizing the health of your citizens."

In Reply to Mr. Darlington, To the Editor of the Indianapolis Journal:

The intellectual views of Superintendent Darlington in regard to the piecework system and our efforts to call out other shops on the Pennsylvania lines, which, in his masterly way, he terms "the last kick of a dying horse," suggests very strongly, and the evidence is accumulating, that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company is doing its business through boys. He says the company's side of the story has been given through the press. etc.; we will also say our side of the story has been given through the press, which has beyond a doubt proven to every fair-minded man that the company's side of the case is based on statements and assertions that cannot be verified.

We have no doubt the company have branded our side false had it not founded on facts which are unmistakable and undeniable, they having refused to answer our agaments against piecework, in itself sufficient to carry the convictions of any intelligent man. As far as piecework is concerned, it is not satisfactory on the Pennsylvania lines, either here or else-where, and we know beyond all doubt piecework is a curse, and the trail of misfortune that trails in its wake is blasting and blighting. I can only speak of one of the many wrongs that arise from this system. Piecework puts a premium on shoddy work. * *

INDIANAPOLIS, April 11. [The Journal has taken the liberty of omitting a portion of Mr. Shortridge's communication containing asseverations against non-unionists that could do nobody any good.

Central Labor Union. At the meeting of the Central Labor Union last night the reports of delegates as to the state of trade were, as a rule, highly favorable. The freight-handlers reported that they had been granted an increase of 5 cents an hour for overtime. The carpenters and painters said they were as busy as they can be, and more union men are in demand. The coopers reported a strike was settled during the day by a compromise. The men had walked ont when they found they were making barrels to fill contracts for a Terre Haute firm whose for the union scale of wages. By the compromise they agree to work so long as no barrels are sent to Terre Haute. The paper-bangers reported their new scale not settled. It was reported that the tailors are having difficulty in settling their scale, and they threaten a strike. The Salesmen's Union, No. 1, was reported flourishing. The sewing girls' delegate said her union is growing fast. The laundry girls reported the new co-operative laundry a success. The carriage-makers said they had received forty new members in the last four weeks. The Central Union directed the grievance committee to visit the State Board of Agriculture, and to induce the board if possible to give the contracts for the erection of the new buildings to local contractors who employ union men, or at least not to enter-tain bids from contractors who will im-port non-union men. It was declared that the board had once agreed to this, but rescinded the promise.

A communication was received from the Commercial Club, asking for the appointment of a committee to confer with the club committee on the subject of an arbitration law. A delegate opposed the move-ment, saying that while arbitration is all right and feasible, any bill on the subject that would pass the Legislathre would not be to the advantage of the employe. The movement seemed to him, he said, an effort upon the part of capitalists, who feel they are losing their main hold, to recover what they are losing. All the law that is needed on this subject, said the delegate, is a statute compelling both sides to abide by the re-sults of arbitration when they have once agreed to.

The sentiment found much indorsement, but the matter was finally referred to the legislative committee to investigate and make report. It was announced that the drug clerks desire to organize a union. Attention was called to the fact that the labor temple committee will meet Friday night to elect trustees, and every union interested was asked to have a delegate present. The president appointed three members of a committee to assist the Salesmen's Union, No. 42, in its effort to make labor after 6 o'clock extra. A quantity of minor business was transacted and adjournment followed.

night to its fullest capacity. There were four hundred participants upon the stage at one time, and the drill was nearer perfection than any other ever seen in this of the total solid matter in the wash water | city. Prof. Herman Osterheild, the instructor of the pupils, is a young, enthusiastic man, and a graduate of the Social Turnverein school of this city. He has been for one year its instructor, having come here from New York some two years ago. Zumpfe's orchestra furnished the music for the occasion, and stimulated the elastic steps of the grand march which began a 8 o'clock.

The ages of the pupils ranged, as usual,

from six to eighteen years. The boys wore the regular style habit of the society, and the girls appeared in short blue dresses with red bows and white stripes. The line of march formed in the corridors on either side of the auditorium and marched in on the main floor to the middle of the stage in front of the audience and ascended the stage in the center. The little boys were tastily arrayed in white waists and large collars, with large black bows, black stockings and soft shoes. After the four hundred scholars had gotten upon the stage, songs, interspersed with calisthenics, were given, and the exercise ended by the older ones leaving the stage to the younger boys and girls, who began in turn climbing poles anspended at the rear of the platform. These poles were perhaps thirty feet long, and the wonderful rapidity with which the little girls and boys climbed them was simply a marvel of muscular development, and training for which the ment and training, for which Professor Osterheild may justly claim considerable distinction. Rope-pulling and other antagonistic games occupied the time until the number was concluded. While there is comparatively little chance in an ironbound exercise to exhibit any feat of skill. still the very excellent exactitude and concert of this movement, including the services of thirty boys, rendered it a very high jumping were the more enjoyable from the fact that nothing was attempted that could not be easily and gracefully done by the performers. Some of the highest and best jumping was done by the youngest boys, who exhibited in a number of instances many excellent efforts. The prettiest exercise of the even-ing was the "Reigen," with fancy steps, by a class of sixty girls. There was not a break or a faulty movement that could be seen. Thirty-two members of the senior class exhibited the possibilities of advanced culture in a series of grouping and the formation of different figures. The most elaborate performance was the damb-bell work by a class of eighty boys, and was consequently interesting. The entertainment was long and interesting. The work of the instructor was felt in every scene, and in the end augmented the admiration of the audience for the work done by him during this year.
